

The Road To Recovery

Families Helping Families

Sponsored by

Clear Brook

FOUNDATION

Families Helping Families is a community service provided by Clear Brook Foundation. This program promotes drug and alcohol awareness and educates the public on the disease of alcoholism and drug addiction. The program consists of a one-hour lecture to provide ongoing education, which is followed by a one-hour group discussion facilitated by individuals who are well-grounded in their own personal recovery programs.

There is no fee for attendance

Families Helping Families is available to everyone. The program is open to recovering alcoholics/chemically dependent persons, parents, spouses, adult children of alcoholics, and people in crisis. Some attend with their family member, who is an addict, while others come alone. Many others are professionals who work in the field of addiction.
